Dear the Chief Editor of Journal of Language and Linguistic Studies,

I would like to express my appreciation to the Journal of Language and Linguistic Studies for my manuscript.

Firstly, I would like to ask for the information about the correct proofreading fee. In the previous emails, it was stated US$150, but in the latest email it was stated US$160. Which one is correct?

Secondly, I would like to add one of colleagues as a co-author. Would it be allowed?

Finally, I have a problem with sending the proofreading fee with Western Union. The nearest WU agent could not send the money an account at a Turkey bank. In my experience, the easiest way to send money from Indonesia to a foreign bank account is by paypal.

Thank you very much.

As you have been informed before, the authors are required to pay a proofreading fee of 160USD just after they are notified that their papers are accepted as a result of the blind-review process.
