After explaining in detail about recount text, the teacher opened question-answer sessions. Some students asked questions related to the topic and the teacher responded the students’ questions. As described below:

T: “Based on my explanation, do you have any questions? Before we did the next step.”
S: “I had a question that what is the other example about recount text? It was according to an experience, so what else?”
T: “some examples of recount text types are: conversations and letters. They had similar with an experience. In thus, they used past tense to explained”

The next step, the teacher asked the students to write a recount text. They were instructed to write the paragraph covering to the topic sentence and details. The teacher did not limited the words would the student make. The topics were free depending on the the students’ interests. The teacher taught her students how to write well. She gave inspiration and some examples to get the idea.

At the end of the class, all students had to submit their final product of writing. Then, The teacher told the student to familiarize write a diary, everything what they want. The teacher said to their student “if you want to write, just write”. Here, the students should write a diary in home. As described below:

T: “did you know about diary?”
S: “I know”.

T: “I had a homework for you all, as usual, you should write a new recount text in a diary. So, you could write a diary everything that you want to write. If you wanted to tell your experience or your friend’s experience and also your letter for your friends. Just write it down. You had 7 days in a week. You should wrote your diary 4 times in week. Do you understand?”
S: “could we write it in the a paper?”.
T: “yes, of course.”

Before closing the class, the teacher made reflection on the learning process, by asking the students what they had learnt, what benefits they obtained from the class. The teacher also asked them if they were happy and enjoyed the lesson or not.
